

Simon Cox Profile

“After a successful amateur career which included representing Wales and Britain on numerous occasions and winning the Welsh Amateur Championship I turned professional, playing on the European Tour and competing in tournaments world-wide, including Australia, New Zealand, South America and Africa.

Among the highlights I represented Wales in the World Cup of golf in Thailand, I also played alongside eight open champions in major events and won the Welsh Professional Championship on two occasions.

A wrist injury curtailed my tournament-playing career and in 1981 I was appointed head-teaching professional at the Marriott St. Pierre Golf Resort. I subsequently taught at a golf centre in Swansea and The South Wales Golf Centre in Barry. My teaching clients have included Gareth Edwards and a very young Rhys Davies. I enjoy all aspects of teaching and have gained a reputation for detailed swing analysis.

I look forward to the next challenge of my career helping members and visitors to Cottrell Park fulfil their golfing potential.”
